

THE NEW COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.— We called attention a few days since to the re-opening of the Collegiate Institute in the University building, under the direction of Mr. E. M. Carpenter. It will be seen by the notice in another column that the school has just opened, and we wish to remind parents that now is the time to send.— New classes are just being formed, and as there will be no vacation till the Holidays, pupils can continue right along in their studies without interruption.

Prof. Benedict, who established this school, says of Mr. C., who succeeds him, "I know of no one who seems to me so well fitted in every respect to carry out my peculiar notions in regard to training the young to good habits of mind, and leading them to satisfactory scholarships, as is Mr. Carpenter."
